🍏 Apple to unveil next iPhone Sept 10

by Nicola Leske, Aug 12, 2013

Apple Inc. is expected to unveil its redesigned iPhone at a special event on Sept 10, according to technology blog AllThingsD. What we might expect: bigger screens, and cheaper models in a range of colors, over the next year, according to several unnamed sources.

🍏 Getting started with iPhoto

by Christopher Breen, MacWorld, August 15, 2013

Breen offers great info and tips about the iLife applications bundled with each new Mac: iPhoto, iMovie, and GarageBand.

These applications, respectively, help you catalog, edit, and share digital images; capture and edit digital videos; and create and edit musical scores, podcasts, and video soundtracks. Although you may not think of yourself as a photographer, filmmaker, or musician, there's absolutely no shame in being an enthusiastic dabbler. Your Mac and these applications can make that possible.

🍏 How to fill an uneditable PDF form in OS X

by Topher Kessler, CNET, August 13, 2013

The PDF format is commonly used to provide electronic forms and other documents, and often these will require you to fill them out and submit them for processing somewhere. If you don't want to have to print and fill out an electronic PDF by hand, here's how to do it quickly and easily on the otherwise static electronic version:
